RESEARCH MISSION

The mission of the Computational Cognitive Neuroscience Group is to formulate mathematical models of human brain function and to empirically validate these using non-invasive functional neuroimaging (EEG and fMRI). Our current work clusters in four project areas that are fundamentally related by a probabilistic modelling approach and combines methodologies from Bayesian statistics, machine learning, and decision science. On the neuroscientific side, we employ this computational framework to understand the neural dynamics of statistical learning in sensory systems (e.g. Ostwald et al. 2008, Ostwald et al. 2012a) and decision making (e.g. Ostwald et al. 2012b, Ostwald et al. 2015, Georgie et al., 2018). On the data-analytical side, we have previously used a set of information-theoretic functionals defined on a model-free probabilistic model to study the correlative structure of simultaneous EEG-fMRI and behavioral data features (Ostwald et al. 2010, 2011a, 2011b). In more recent work, we use a model-based approach that embeds delay differential equation systems describing the interaction between cortical units in fully probabilistic forward models for EEG-fMRI (Ostwald & Starke 2016). Finally, we contribute to the development of a variational Bayesian approach for stochastic time-series analysis (Ostwald et al. 2014, Starke & Ostwald, 2017). Variational Bayes is a deterministic-approximate inference framework for statistical models, which in the brain imaging field enjoys widespread popularity as a general theory of brain function and as an inversion scheme for models of functional neural connectivity.

PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS

2014 –	Assistant Professor (W1) Computational Cognitive Neuroscience Department of Education and Psychology Freie Universität Berlin
2014 –	Associated Scientist Center for Adaptive Rationality Max-Planck-Institute for Human Development
2012 – 2014	Research Scientist Center for Adaptive Rationality Max-Planck-Institute for Human Development
2010 – 2012	Research Scientist Bernstein Center for Computational Neuroscience Berlin
2007 – 2010	PhD Student School of Psychology University of Birmingham

EDUCATION AND DEGREES

2005 – 2012	BSc Mathematics	FernUniversität in Hagen
2007 – 2010	PhD Psychology	University of Birmingham
2004 – 2006	MSc Neuroscience	University of Tübingen
2002 – 2003	First State Examination Medicine	University of Hamburg
2000 – 2002	Preclinical Studies Medicine	University of Hamburg

RESEARCH FUNDING, FELLOWSHIPS, & AWARDS

2017 – 2018	Wikimedia Open Science Fellows Program (€5,000)
2016	Central Teaching Award of Freie Universität Berlin (€10,000)
2016	NeuroImage Editor's Choice Award
2015 – 2016	Freie Universität Berlin – E:Club Anschubfinanzierung für Brückenprojekte (€ 14,800)
2011 – 2013	Postdoctoral research fellowship (£ 134,151) by the Hadwen Trust for Humane Research (declined)
2007 – 2009	Graduate Studies Fellowship, University of Birmingham
2001 – 2006	German Academic Scholarship Foundation
