THE PRINCIPAL INVESTIGATORS

LIESELOTTE AHNERT

Ahnert (Professor of Developmental Psychology at University of Vienna/Austria) studied psychology at Humboldt-University of Berlin and Friedrich-Schiller University of Jena in Germany where she received her Ph.D.s in 1982 and 2000. She chaired the Interdisciplinary Center for Applied Research on Socialization (IZAS) in Berlin, of which she was the director from 1991-2001. Her research is concerned with interaction and attachment patterns in infancy, as well as child early social and emotional development in different domains and contexts.

ULRIKE EHLERT

Ehlert (Professor of Clinical Psychology at University of Zurich/Switzerland) studies sociology and psychology at the University Trier/Germany where she also received her Ph.D. She is certified psychotherapist and made ample practical experiences as Head of the Psychological Consultation Liaison Services and various hospitals before she got full professorship in Zurich/Switzerland in 1999. Her research is concerned with many unsolved questions from Psychobiology and Behavioral Medicine, focussing, among other topics, on transitions to parenthood.

HARALD A. EULER

Euler (Professor em. of Evolutionary Psychology at University of Kassel/Germany) studied psychology at the University of Bonn/Germany and at Washington State University in the US, where he also received his Ph.D. in 1972. From 1974 to 2009 he held a full professorship of psychology at the University of Kassel/ Germany. Since his retirement in 2009 he has been working as a visiting scholar at the Universities of Frankfurt a. M. and Bochum in Germany, and at Vienna/Austria. His primary interest has always been evolutionary psychology, specialized, in family relations and sex differences.

PETRA KLUMB

Klumb (Professor of Personnel and Organizational Psychology at University of Fribourg/Switzerland) studied psychology at the Free University of Berlin and received her Ph. D. at the Technical University of Berlin in Germany. She became interested in activities across the life course, and developed ambulatory monitoring techniques to measure activities and affects in daily life. Based on micro-longitudinal studies, her research group explores, how the demands at work and in the family affect family and couple relationships, performance, achievement, well-being, and health.

JULIUS KUHL

Kuhl (Professor of Personality Psychology at University of Osnabrueck/Germany) is head of the personality section at the department of psychology at University of Osnabrueck (since 1986). He explored the functional basis of personality development, and created the world-wide acknowledged Personality Systems Interaction Theory (PSI) integrating modern scientific evidences from motivational, developmental, cognitive and neuropsychological research. Using PSI, he aims to bridge the gap between various abilities and the scholastic performance in young children.

KATJA NOWACKI

Nowacki (Professor of Clinical and Social Psychology at University of Applied Sciences and Arts, Dortmund/Germany) studied social work in Dortmund and psychology in Bochum where she received her Ph.D. in 2007. She is well experienced with psychopathological pathways, and the child welfare system in Germany. Her research has dealt with psychological well-being in foster children, in young German adults being taking care of in group homes, and in ethnic minority groups.

THE DISCUSSANTS

MICHAEL E.
LAMB

Lamb (Professor of Psychology at the University of Cambridge/UK) received his PhD from Yale University (USA) in 1976 and has been head of the Section on Social and Emotional Development at the NICHD in Bethesda (USA) from 1987 to 2005. His research is concerned with social and emotional development, especially in infancy and early childhood; the determinants and consequences of adaptive and maladaptive parental behavior; children's testimony; and the interface of psychology and biology. He has been one of the first psychologists who explored fatherhood.

CAROL M.
WORTHMAN

Worthman (Samuel Candler Dobbs Professor of Anthropology at Emory University in Atlanta/USA) received her Ph.D. in Biological Anthropology from Harvard University (USA). Her scholarly work has been far reaching, exploring how human nature and culture influences and legitimates our behavior, values, and decisions. She aims to illuminate the pathways to differential human well-being, and is concerned as much with psychological as physical development and health.
